Dear Parents/Carers,

I am writing to inform you that after the Christmas break, and in line with the Government's 'Climate Change for Schools' agenda, we will be launching a new topic that allows children to engage in and learn about climate change.

We will be using age appropriate materials and teach in a manner that does not alarm children in any way. The resources we are using discuss climate change in a positive way making it clear that there are things we can do to make changes for the future. Our intention is to get children involved in playing a part in making us a 'greener' school and will focus on what we can do to help.

The majority of the learning will focus on things such as saving water, keeping electricity use to a minimum, recycling, reducing waste and learning about supporting nature. These aspects of the topic are commonly discussed with children in school, and in many of our children's homes; our new topic will simply link these ideas with the wider rationale associated with environmental issues and sustainability.

We are very excited to get started with this new topic and look forward to your continuing support.

Regards
Ms Kimpton
